

Greetings from the President Claudio Riedi

I do not normally throw economic data at you in my foreword to the Newsletter. But this time is different. It is crucial that we all pay attention to US EU trade negotiations, as they will affect all our businesses.

In January and February of 2019, the United States imported twice as much from Germany as it exported to Germany (some $10 billion vs. $5 billion). Source: Census.com. That would seem to be a hopeful sign for US German businesses, as it underscores what we all know: German products are popular in the United States. Germany is the United States' largest European trading partner and still the sixth-largest market for U.S. exports.

However, imports from Germany have not grown since March/April 2018, and at times have dipped slightly. Many of the members of the GABC with ties to Germany are treading water, and are not participating the economic boom indicated by the domestic stock market in the US. Why is that?

I am not an economist, and your guess is as good as mine. However, I am of the firm belief that insecurity and threats of imposition of tariffs on the European Union are not productive, no matter which administration makes them. As the gross trade imbalance mentioned above indicates, it is essential that Europe open its markets for US agricultural products. The EU has agreed to renegotiate trade agreements with the US, but only for industrial goods. France, in particular, has been obstinent due to Washington's rejection of the 2015 Paris Climate Agreement. Thus, threats of tariffs are in the air.

The odds are better than 50% that the trade negotiations between the US and the EU will not be successful, experts of Commercebank have recently stated. That should concern all of us, as the imposition of 25% tariffs on many European (i.e.

German) goods, and the resulting reduction in sales of German goods in the US might cause a slow-down or even recession of the German economy. For those of us who depend on the success of clients with German roots and their investments in the United States, that would be a frightening prospect.

Thus: let's all keep an eye on the trade negotiations between Washington and Brussels, and let's hope for a positive outcome, with a minimum of collateral damage. It does not take an economist to know that a sinking tide lowers all boats.

CANNABINOIDS AND CANCER

The antitumor action of cannabinoids was first described in 1975 when it was reported that a 20-day administration of THC was associated with a reduction of the growth of lung adenocarcinoma in mouse. Since then animal studies have proved the anti-cancer properties of the cannabinoids.

Cannabinoids are used in cancer patients to treat the side-effects of chemotherapy, to increase appetite and alleviate pain. Commercially available cannabinoids are dronabinol (Marinol), nabilone (Cesamet) both synthetic THC and Sativex (THC and CBD extracted from the plant, therefore not synthetic). They are prescribed for the treatment of nausea and vomiting as well as pain relief, stimulation of appetite and reduction in weight loss.

Marinol and Cesamet are available in the USA but the “organic” Sativex is not and can be obtained in Canada. The German Health System pays for Sativex in those patients in need of it.

Cannabinoids anti-tumor activity is at different stages in cancer:

1. Apoptosis or cancer cell death and autophagy.
2. Proliferation, decreasing the size of the tumor.
3. Neovascularization and angiogenesis, inhibiting the creation of new blood vessels which are the highway for cancer dissemination.
4. Inhibiting metastatic proliferation.

Cannabinoids (THC and CBD) seem to destroy the cancer cell without affecting the surrounding healthy cells.

The list of cancers where the cannabinoids may play a role continue to grow and over the next few weeks, we will revise some of these and the potential therapeutic implications of the cannabinoid system.

Announcing Our GABC Benefits Program

Dear GABC members,

We are happy to announce our new and updated GABC benefits for members!

What is the benefits program about?

All companies/natural persons with products and/or services can offer a discount or any other kind of benefit to GABC members. It would be a non-binding agreement between the GABC and the participating companies, in which they can freely participate, and terms and conditions would be done under their own rules and regulations.

What is the duration of the program?

The program aims to be permanent in the sense of providing general benefits to all members. However, companies will commit in a freely way and can withdraw from the program on a monthly basis.

We are looking forward to hearing from you and the benefits you'll be willing to offer to our members. With this we can start creating the benefit list to launch the program. Lastly, we understand all companies are focused on different fields and of course we know all of us can't allow benefits of the same dimension, and this is why we are open to listen and discuss about it.

Should you have any questions or comments, please don't hesitate to reach out back to us.

Kind regards,
The GABC Team
